

Wishes on how we want to work together

We live in a society where we learn shitty behaviours that turn us against each other instead of uniting us. Today we want a place where we can talk to each other in solidarity. And wish from all those who are here...

- * That all have an appreciative and benevolent attitude towards each other.
- * An attitude critical of discrimination, acceptance of responsibility and the willingness to question oneself.
- * That we put aside our perfectionism and treat mistakes with kindness. Knowing that we are all still unlearning....
- * That everyone takes good care of themselves and their boundaries so that they can take good care of others.
- * Find ways to respectfully challenge others and be open to challenges of your own views. Think about how to question ideas without personal attacks.
- * We are all here to learn. We would ask people who tend to talk a lot in public discussions to try something new and focus on listening -- and we would encourage those who find it difficult to participate in discussions to try speaking their ideas, even if they do not feel "fully formed."

If you notice something or have experienced cross-border behaviour, you can talk to the people from the organising group (they all wear a small green sticker) or the awareness team (the awareness team wears green vests). You can also come to the information desk.

We also have a quiet room where you can go in and two people who are available to listen. If you want to go into the room and/or talk to someone, please let us know..

Abolition now! for a world beyond the blue line (exhibition)

You will find the exhibition all day in the exhibition room

Open rehearsal with Widerklang choir
