

Dr. Petra Anders - University of Bamberg Germany

Dr Petra Anders is a research assistant at the University of Bamberg. Currently her intersectional research focuses on cinematic representations of disability. In 2021, she has already given papers at online conferences in Ireland, the UK, the US and Germany. Recent publications include the chapter 'Welcome to the Freakhouse? Disability bei Wim Wenders' in Jörn Glasenapp's anthology 'Kontinuität im Wandel. Begegnungen mit dem Filmemacher Wim Wenders'. Publications in English are forthcoming in 2022. petra.anders@uni-bamberg.de

Mariza Avgeri - Law Department, Maynooth University, Ireland

Mariza Avgeri is a qualified lawyer in Greece and an Associate lecturer in Law, Culture and Society at the Open University, UK. She has graduated with a Bachelor of Laws and a Master of Political Science from VU Amsterdam. She is currently completing her PhD in Maynooth University at the Law Department working on transgender asylum claims and jurisprudence in the context of the European Union. She is a John and Pat Hume fellow for the duration of her doctoral studies. In the past, she has worked as a legal researcher, a case worker at the Greek Asylum Service and a member of the Appeals' Committees. She has participated in many civil rights initiatives regarding migrant rights and LGBT rights, both as a lawyer and as a member of the queer community. marizavg@hotmail.com

Abdelnacer Ben Abderrezak Ph.D.- Department of English, University of Mohamed Khider-Biskra, Algeria

Dr. Abdelnacer Ben Abderrezak is an Associate Professor in the English department at Mohamed Khider University, Algeria. He holds a PhD in sexuality and gender studies from the University of Djillali Liabes, Sidi Bel Abbes, Algeria. He is also interested in Postcolonial women's writing. He has published a number of articles and participates in different international conferences and study days. a.benabderrazek@univ-biskra.dz

Aaron Benedetti - University of California, Davis, United States

Aaron Benedetti is a PhD candidate in cultural studies with an emphasis in feminist theory and research. His dissertation explores the position of LGBTQ counterarchives and community archives within contemporary US neoliberalism and its political temporalities. At UC Davis, Aaron works alternately as an instructor and teaching assistant in the Departments of American Studies, English, and Gender, Sexuality, and Women's Studies. abenedetti@ucdavis.edu

Tengjin Bian - 中国 (China)

Tengjin Bian is an independent visual artist. They try to use different materials and digital technologies to create posters, videos, installations and other art works, exploring the concept of body under different eras and discourses, and the identity and gender, cognition and technology superimposed on the body. The topic currently under study is Bodies in Flux: Posthuman Drag Arts and Performers in the Digital Age. biantengjin@gmail.com

Sarah Bodelson - Malmö University, Sweden

Sarah Bodelson is a PhD student in Global Politics at Malmö University. In her doctoral research project, Sarah Bodelson is exploring how the multi-layered EU, nation-state and imagined national border(s) constitute sites of violence, struggle, and knowledge production in the movement for reproductive rights and justice in Ireland. Methodologically and theoretically, the PhD student is situated in postcolonial feminist theorising on the raced, gendered, classed nation, Marxist feminist and postcolonial feminist theories on the body, reproductive labour, and racial capitalism. During spring 2022, Sarah Bodelson will be a visiting PhD student at the School of Law and Government at DCU and affiliated to EROSS. Email: sarah.bodelson@mau.se Website: <https://mau.se/en/research/projects/everyday-bordering-and-border-crossing-solidarities-for-reproductive-justice/>

Angelos Bollas - SALIS, DCU, Ireland

Angelos Bollas is a PhD student at Dublin City University. His main interests are representations of sexuality in popular culture, queer theory, and applications of diversity approaches in education. angelos.bollas@dcu.ie

Sihem Boubekour Ph.D - English Department, Dr. Moulay Taher University of Saida, Algeria

Sihem Boubekour is a senior lecturer at the University of Saida-Algeria. She received her Master degree in 2013 and her PhD in 2017. sihem.boubekour@yahoo.com

Azzeddine Bouhassoun Ph.D - Department of English Studies, Belhadj Bouchaib University, Algeria

Azzeddine Bouhassoun is a Professor of Comparative Literature. His research areas include romantic and spiritual writings, modernism, postmodernism and postcolonial literature. He currently works on Algerian literature and is mainly interested in the postcolonial shift of 'consciousness', alienation and nostalgia, and narrative strategies among Algerian writers. azzeddinebouhassoun@gmail.com

Louise Bruton - School of Communications, DCU, Ireland

Louise Bruton is a journalist, DJ, disability activist, playwright and pop lover. She regularly writes about music, travel, access and life as a wheelchair user for the Irish Times, the Irish Independent, the Sunday Business Post, Lonely Planet and Image Magazine. She made her theatre debut in 2017's Dublin Fringe Festival as a playwright and a performer with a sold out run of Why Won't You Have Sex With Me?, a show that looks into disability, relationships and sex. As a DJ, she co-runs the club night Pure Shores and hosts the Thirst Trap on Dublin Digital Radio. louise.bruton@dcu.ie

B Camminga Ph.D - African Centre for Migration & Society, Wits University, South Africa

B Camminga (they/them) is a Postdoctoral Fellow at the African Centre for Migration & Society, Wits University, South Africa. They work broadly on issues relating to gender identity and expression on the African continent. Their first monograph Transgender Refugees & the Imagined South Africa (Palgrave, 2019) received the 2019 Sylvia Rivera Award in Transgender Studies (with Aren Azuira) and honourable mention in the Ruth Benedict Prize for Queer Anthropology from the American Anthropology Association. They are the co-convenor of the African LGBTQI+ Migration Research Network (ALMN). They are currently working on a new collection addressing African LGBTQI+ migration entitled: Queer and Trans African Mobilities: Migration, Diaspora and Asylum (Zed/Bloomsbury 2022).

Aisling Callan - School of Nursing and Human Sciences, DCU, Ireland

Aisling Callan is a PhD candidate at Dublin City University. Her interest in LGBTQ issues motivates her to facilitate the unfolding of stories of intimate partner violence as told by gay and bisexual men. She is currently the lead on a qualitative narrative study exploring how men experience abuse in same-sex relationships. Her interests also include violence, gender, and sexual minority-based research with a particular focus on shedding light on marginalised populations that have gone unheard in academic and broader social discourses. aisling.callan8@mail.dcu.ie

David Carroll - SALIS, DCU, Ireland

David Carroll is an experienced Social Justice expert with a demonstrated history of working in various clinical, health care and NGO industries to effect change for commonly marginalised groups, including LGBTI & traveller communities, as well as victims of Human Trafficking. Holding the post of Executive Director with Ireland's national LGBTI youth service, Belong To, during the Marriage Equality referendum, David was heavily involved in both this campaign and in successful advocacy efforts to introduce gender recognition legislation in Ireland. David completed an MA in Sexuality Studies (MASS) at DCU in 2012, earning a distinction. In 2018, David embarked on a PhD at SALIS, DCU, where he was awarded the inaugural Gabrielle Carty Award. In 2019, he was awarded an Irish Research Council grant to further his research topic, which aims to unearth the extent of influence queer identities held, over pop music in the 1980s. His research interests also extend beyond pop music, to other intersections of queer sexualities and popular culture. David Carroll is currently a board member of Outhouse LGBT community centre in Dublin. He enjoys running, and, when not in the midst of a pandemic, travel. david.carroll35@mail.dcu.ie

Alicia Castillo Villanueva, Ph. D. - SALIS, DCU, Ireland

Alicia Castillo Villanueva is Assistant Professor in Spanish at Dublin City University. Prior to this, she held different academic positions at the University College Cork and the University of Limerick. She has a primary degree in Hispanic Philology, a MA in Hispanic Studies and Literary Translation, and a PhD on Gender Studies. Alicia's research lies in the fields of Cultural and Gender studies. She researches different aspects of gender and sexuality studies such as contemporary representations of gender-based violence, identity, migration, memory and gender, narratives of trauma and resistance, among others. alicia.castillovillanueva@dcu.ie

Arpita Chakraborty - Dublin City University, Ireland

Arpita Chakraborty is an Irish Research Council Research fellow working on domestic violence in the South Asian migrant community in Ireland. arpita.chakraborty@dcu.ie

Melissa Corbally - DProf (Health and Social Care) – Dublin City University, Ireland

Melissa Corbally is a lecturer in the School of Nursing, Psychotherapy and Community Health. Her current teaching interests in nurse education include patient assessment, narrative competence, recognition of deteriorating patients and clinical judgement and decision-making. She runs a module entitled Violence, Abuse and Health for health and society students which covers many aspects of this phenomenon and its effect on individuals in society. Her research interests include domestic violence/abuse, masculinity, gender, narrative methods and nursing/ nursing assessment. She supervises PhD students in these areas. She completed her DProf (Health and Social Care) in 2011 with the University of Salford, England. Her thesis was entitled Making Sense of the Unbelievable: A Biographical Narrative Study of Men's stories of Female Abuse. melissa.corbally@dcu.ie

Cristina Diamant - Babeş-Bolyai University, Romania

Co-director of the London Science Fiction Research Community, advisor for the Metacritic Center for Advanced Literary Studies, and National Executive Committee member of the Independent Workers Union. Former visiting scholar at the Centre for Gender, Sexuality and Writing at the University of Kent, currently teaching English at the Cork Life Centre while working on a doctoral thesis titled “Rejecting the Straight Mind: The Hard Power of Monique Wittig and the Soft Power of Jeanette Winterson.” She investigates the tension between radicalism and assimilation in a transnational framework, acknowledging the uneven and combined development of feminism. A former assistant editor of the Metacritic Journal for Comparative Studies and Theory, she is currently a member of its editorial board, as well as editor for the cultural magazine Echinox at her home university and a member of the editorial committee for Forward, the all-Ireland publication of the Connolly Youth Movement. cristina.diamant@ubbcluj.ro

Karishmeh Felfeli-Crawford Ph.D. - University College Cork, Ireland

Karishmeh Felfeli-Crawford has recently completed a PhD at University College Cork on the analysis of popular music, notably the 1980s synthpop duo Erasure (Vince Clarke and Andy Bell), under the supervision of Professor Jonathan Stock and Dr Alexander Khalil, and with input from the band. Karishmeh is a former examiner for the Royal Irish Academy of Music, a former presenter on BBC Radio 3 and a first-class honours graduate of University College Dublin's Masters in Musicology. An Indian born and educated scholar of Western music (including Mozart, on which she has published in JSMI 2019), Karishmeh is also project associate at the University of Huddersfield's cutting-edge IRiMaS, and co-secretary of the Society for Ethnomusicology (US and Canada) SIG “Music Analysis”. Karishmeh's recent publications include an article on decolonising music analysis via the fusion band Indian Ocean's song Kandisa in Ethnomusicology Forum (July 2021) edited by Shzr Ee Tan. karishmeh.felfeli@umail.ucc.ie

Patricia García Ph. D - Universidad de Alcalá Spain

Dr Patricia García is a Ramón y Cajal researcher in Literary Theory and Comparative Literature at the Universidad de Alcalá (Spain). She has previously served as an Associate Professor in Hispanic and Comparative Literature at the University of Nottingham. Her research focuses on literary urban studies and their intersections with gender and sexuality studies and with representations of the supernatural.

She has directed the project Gender and the Hispanic Fantastic (funded by the British Academy) and has been a fellow of the Helsinki Collegium for Advanced Studies (2018-2019) with a EURIAS fellowship. She is a member of Executive Committee of the European Society of Comparative Literature, of ALUS: Association for Literary Urban Studies, of the Spanish Research Group on the Fantastic (GEF, Grupo de Estudios de lo Fantástico) and of the editorial board of the academic journal BRUMAL: Research Journal on the Fantastic. Her most notable publications include the monographs Space and the Postmodern Fantastic in Contemporary Literature: the Architectural Void (Routledge, 2015) and The Urban Fantastic in 19th Century European Literature (forthcoming, Palgrave, 2021).

She is the founder and director of Fringe Urban Narratives: Peripheries, Identities, Intersections, an interdisciplinary network that offers a platform for researchers and artists interested in the cultural processes of imagining and narrating urban experiences from the margins (urbanfringes.com/). patricia.garciag@uah.es

Calogero Giametta Ph. D - Aix-Marseille University, France

Calogero Giametta, Ph.D., is a sociologist with a research focus on gender, sexuality and the political economy of migration. He is affiliated to the Laboratoire de Sociologie of Aix-Marseille University. His work to date has specifically analyzed migrant sex work, the right of asylum for LGBTQ people, and anti-human trafficking interventions in western Europe. He is the author of The Sexual Politics of Asylum (Routledge, 2017). calogiame@gmail.com

Debbie Ging Ph. D. - School of Communications, DCU, Ireland

Debbie Ging is Associate Professor of Media Studies in the School of Communications. Her current research is concerned with gender and social media, focusing in particular on online misogyny, the manosphere, incels and the radicalization of young men into online male supremacy groups. Debbie is a co-author of the first government-commissioned report on the sexualisation and commercialisation of children in Ireland. Together with Prof. Eugenia Siapera, she has co-edited a special issue of Feminist Media Studies on Online Misogyny (2018) and an edited collection entitled Gender Hate Online: Understanding the New Anti-Feminism (Palgrave Macmillan, 2019). Debbie has also co-edited a special issue of the International Journal of Bullying Prevention on Gender, Sexuality and Bullying with Dr. Aoife Neary in University of Limerick. Debbie is Ireland Corresponding Editor of the journal Men and Masculinities. She is a member of the National Anti-Bullying Research and Resource Centre and of the Institute for Future Media and Journalism (FuJo) in DCU. debbie.ging@dcu.ie

Victoria Holt - University of Roehampton, England

I'm a PhD research student at the University of Roehampton, living and working in Brighton. My research explores sex workers' experiences of domestic and familial abuse and is deeply informed by my activist work, and my history working in women's outreach and frontline services. Prior to embarking on a PhD, I received a BA in Political Science and Philosophy from the University of Birmingham (2010), and an MA in Sexual Dissidence in Literature and Culture from the University of Sussex (2014).

I am active in the fight for decriminalisation of sex work, and I work closely with SWARM, Decrim Now and ECP. I am co-convenor of the British Sociological Association's Violence Against Women and Girls Study Group and a board member for the Sex Work Research Hub. I organise two separate international PhD networks: one for researchers of the sex industry, the other for researchers in and around VAWG. holtv@roehampton.ac.uk <https://forgedintimacies.com/>

Mohammad Hosseini - School of Theology, Philosophy, and Music, DCU, Ireland

Mohammad Hosseini holds a B.A. in Business Management (2013, Eindhoven), and an M.A. in Applied Ethics (2016, Utrecht). In 2017 he became a PhD candidate in Research Ethics and Integrity at Dublin City University (DCU) in Ireland. He specialises in ethical aspects of scholarly authorship and citations. His PhD thesis explores ethics of contributor role ontologies and taxonomies as modern means of attributing credit and responsibilities in academic publications. Additionally, he is a member of work package 5 of the EnTIRE (Mapping Normative Frameworks for EThics and Integrity of REsearch) project. Since 2017 he has been a guest lecturer of research ethics and integrity, and since 2019 he lectures on engineering ethics in DCU. He is one of the group leaders of the attribution working group of FORCE11 community, and the chair/founder of MyCites taskforce. More recently he has been conducting research on gender issues in publications. mohammad.hosseini2@mail.dcu.ie

Boyi Huang - SALIS, DCU, Ireland

Boyi Huang is a PhD student at SALIS, DCU. His research lies at the intersections among Audiovisual Translation, Media Studies, Gender and Sexuality Studies, Fandom Studies, and China Studies. His current research is focused on Queer Community Translation/Subtitling. boyi.huang3@mail.dcu.ie

Jean-Philippe Imbert - SALIS, DCU, Ireland

Jean-Philippe Imbert lectures in Comparative Literature and Sexuality Studies at Dublin City University. He researches and publishes on literary and artistic representations of Mexican, Irish and French 20th and 21st centuries, focusing on the relationship between sexuality, gender and the aesthetic treatment of evil, trauma, angst or perversion. He has been president of the ADEFFI (Association des Études Françaises et Francophones d'Irlande) and of the Irish Association of Mexican Studies. He was Research and Education Officer for IASSCS (The International Association for the Studies of Sexuality, Culture and Society). He also curated international art exhibitions (photography) in Delhi, Dublin or Mexico City. jean-philippe.imbert@dcu.ie

Ujjwal Jana P.h. D. - School of Humanities, Pondicherry University, India.

Dr. Ujjwal Jana is an Associate Professor of Literary Studies in the Department of English, School of Humanities, Pondicherry University, India. His areas of interests are Indian Poetics, Literary studies, Translation Studies and Digital Humanities. He is the co-editor of Green Symphony: Studies in Ecocriticism, Ecological Criticism for our Times: Literature, Nature and Critical inquiry (Sarup & Sons, New Delhi 2011), Ecological Criticism for our Times: Literature, Nature and Critical inquiry (Authorspress, New Delhi 2011) and Subaltern Vision: a Study in Postcolonial Indian English Novel (Cambridge Scholars Publishing, UK 2012). He has authored two text books published by the Directorate of Distance Education, Pondicherry University. He is the author of English Communication Skills & Grammar (Directorate of Distance Education, Pondicherry University 2015) and Applied Phonetics in English (Directorate of Distance Education, Pondicherry University 2016). He has published essays on Indian Poetics, Literary Studies, Translation Studies, Indian literature in English. He was a Fulbright visiting Lecturer, India studies program, Indiana University, Bloomington, USA in 2007-2008. He was nominated for the Commonwealth Academic Staff Fellowship in the UK in 2013. He has been awarded the Sahitya Akademy Travel Grants Award in 2014. He was a visiting postdoctoral faculty in the Department of English, Leipzig University in 2014 sponsored by ICSSR and DFG. He was a visiting postdoctoral researcher in the Department of English, University of Johannesburg, South Africa, sponsored by ICSSR, India and NIHSS South Africa in 2017. He has been awarded with the MHRD, Govt of India Funded International Collaborative Project in Digital Humanities in Indian Rim under SPARC (Scheme for Promotion of Academic and Research Collaboration) to collaborate with Western Sydney University, Australia for 2019-2021. He has been selected for the Faculty Mobility Award by Shastri Indo-Canadian Institute and the Ministry of Human Resource Development for 2020-2021. Website: https://www.pondiuni.edu.in/faculy_profiles/dr-ujjwal-jana/ Email: ujjwaljn@gmail.com

Rasa Kamarauskaite - School of Slavonic and East European Studies, UCL, England

I am a Phd student at SSEES, UCL. I am currently working on a thesis about LGBTQ (in)visibilities in Lithuania. I am interested in how Lithuanian non-heterosexual people manage their sexuality in everyday lives. I wish to examine when, where, and how they disclose it, keep it a secret, or choose a strategy in between, and what determines their decision. The background for my research is informed by studies of public and private, body and space, sexuality, communism and post-communism. rasa.kamarauskaite@gmail.com

Robbie Lawlor - SALIS, DCU, Ireland

Robbie became active within the HIV community since his diagnosis in 2012. Robbie is a member of European AIDS Treatment Group and is a co-founder of Access to Medicines Ireland. Robbie is currently a Ph.D. candidate at Dublin City University and has a particular interest in grassroots activism and the access to medicines movement in Eastern Europe. His research is exploring HIV/HEP C treatment activism in Ukraine. robert.lawlor29@mail.dcu.ie

Reem Lebbar - DCU, Ireland

I am an Architect and Urban Planner specialized in the MENA region. I have carried out volunteer work in Sao Paulo, Brazil, with favelas NGO's, in New York with the Museum of Reclaimed Urban Spaces and in Paris with the LGBTQ Asylum Seekers Center. I have also studied refugee camps in Beirut (Libanon) and Tindouf (Algeria). rim.lebbar2@mail.dcu.ie

Matheus Lira Bento - Federal University of Pelotas, Brazil

Matheus Lira Bento is a Ph.D. candidate in Sociology at the Federal University of Pelotas (UFPel), with an M.A. in Sociology from the same institution. He also graduated in Law from the Catholic University of Pelotas (UCPel). He has experience and interest in the Sociology of Migration, focusing on asylum seekers and LGBTQIA+ migrants. Bento's latest publications are on South-South migration, especially on the Venezuelan migration crisis and the Necropolitics Theory. Since 2013 he has pro bono experience consulting migrants and refugees in the Southern Region of Brazil. matheuslirabento@gmail.com

Meg Lonergan - Legal Studies, Carleton University Canada

Meg Lonergan [she/they] is a Ph.D. Candidate in Legal Studies in the Collaborative Specialization in Political Economy program at Carleton University in Ottawa, Canada. She holds an M.A. in Gender Studies from Queen's University (Kingston) and an Honours Bachelor of Social Science in Joint Honours Criminology and Women's Studies from the University of Ottawa. Her research interests include cultural criminology; criminal law; feminist controversies; sex, technology, and regulation; qualitative methods and research ethics. meganlonergan@cmail.carleton.ca

Shahriyar Mansouri P.h.D. - Faculty of Letters and Humanities, Shahid Beheshti University, Iran

I am Assistant Professor of Modern Irish and English Literature at Shahid Beheshti University, Tehran; and IASIL Regional Bibliography Representative for Iran. I specialize in the modern Irish novel, with special interests in James Joyce, Samuel Beckett, Flann O'Brien, Máirtín Ó Cadhain, Disability studies, Memory studies, Deaf Studies, and reading modern Irish literature in light of contemporary continental philosophy.

Email: s_mansouri@sbu.ac.ir Website: <http://facultymembers.sbu.ac.ir/mansouri/>

Isabelle Marc - Universidad Complutense, Spain and USIAS, France

With a PhD in French literature from the Complutense University of Madrid (Spain), where she is now associate professor, Isabelle Marc works on French contemporary culture, especially on mainstream popular music and literature. Her research focuses on the relationship between aesthetics (popular, highbrow, middlebrow), identity (national, gender and racial) and transcultural phenomena in the European context (cultural transfers and music diplomacy).

From a cultural studies and gender studies perspective, she has published extensively on French ACI (auteur-compositeur-interprète - which can be considered as equivalent to the figure of singer-songwriter in English) and popular music in general in journals such as Modern & Contemporary France, French Cultural Studies, Belphégor and Volume! La revue des musiques populaires, and on French contemporary women writers, in particular Virginie Despentes. She has recently co-edited three collective volumes: The Singer-Songwriter in Europe: Paradigms, Politics and Place (Routledge, 2016); Canon et écrits de femmes en France et en Espagne dans l'actualité (2011-2016) (Peter Lang, 2020) and Carmen revisitée/Revisiter Carmen (Peter Lang, 2020). In 2014-2015, she was awarded a Leverhulme Research Fellowship to study music transfers and cultural public policies at the University of Leeds (United Kingdom), where she co-convenes the European Popular Musics Research Group; she is convenor of the research group on Literary and Cultural Studies and Gender Studies at Complutense University and is editor of Thélème. Revista Complutense de Estudios Franceses.

During her time in Strasbourg, Isabelle Marc will be hosted by Professor Alessandro Arbo, from the research unit Contemporary Approaches to Artistic Creation and Reflection (ACCRA), and carry out her research within a new Interdisciplinary Thematic Institute (ITI) of the University of Strasbourg: the Centre for research and experimentation on the artistic act (CREAA). isabelle.marc@filol.ucm.es
<https://www.ucm.es/isabellemarc/curriculum>

Eoin Mc Carney - SALIS, DCU, Ireland

Eoin McCarney is a Phd researcher in the School of Applied Languages and Intercultural Studies. His research is focussed on space and sexual/systemic violence in Irish and Mexican detective fiction. eoin.mccarney2@mail.dcu.ie

Lauren McNamara Ph. D. - Mary Immaculate College, Ireland

Dr Lauren McNamara graduated with her Doctorate from Mary Immaculate College, University of Limerick, Ireland. Her thesis explored the representation of disability in popular contemporary novels. Her research interests include Disability Studies, Postcolonialism, Performance Poetry, Performance Studies, Gender Studies, and Modern Irish Poetry and Theatre. As a poet she has won the Poetry Ireland Yeats' Tower Poetry Slam and has twice come runner up at the national All-Ireland Poetry Slam Championships. As a playwright she has won the Limerick Fringe Spirit of the Fringe Award as well as the Galway Fringe Spoken word show award and has been a recipient of a Words Ireland Mentorship and an Arts Council awarded place on a one-year playwriting course with Olivier award winning Fishamble theatre Company. She also spent three months studying in Columbia University New York on an Erasmus+ Scholarship. mcnamaralauren@outlook.ie

Sarah Meehan O'Callaghan Ph. D. - SALIS Alumni, Ireland

I am an independent scholar within the fields of psychoanalysis and drama studies. My recent PhD concerned an interdisciplinary study of the trauma of the body in the drama of Artaud, Beckett and Genet from a psychoanalytic perspective. I am one of the organisers of the annual Irish Psychoanalytic Film Festival that takes place in Dublin (DCU) now in its 12th year. I have been a member of the Dublin Lacan Studies Group for many years. I have published articles on psychoanalysis on the topics such as disability, sexuality and a queer perspective on Lacan's concept of the phallus. I am one of the organisers of the Disabilities and Sexualities Conference taking place in DCU in March 2021. meehas23@mail.dcu.ie

Michael Monaghan Ph. D. - SALIS Alumni, Ireland

Michael received his PhD from DCU in 2020 and has taught seminars on the subjects of serial killers and femmes fatales in art, literature and film in the work of Oscar Wilde, John Banville and Patricia Highsmith. He has written for Cult quarterly magazine on serial killers on film. His research focuses on literary murder, femmes fatales, serial killers, and gendered discourses of ekphrasis and "the gaze" in literature and film. A climate activist, he co-authored a booklet on the concept of "food sovereignty" for Friends of the Earth Ireland in 2020. He teaches English as a second language in Limerick. michael.monaghan7@mail.dcu.ie

Dónal Mulligan - School of Communications, DCU, Ireland

Assistant professor - lecturer and researcher - at Dublin City University's School of Communications, interested in interdisciplinary digital research topics, and teaching on a range of modules related to digital media analysis, design and production. Doctoral research focussed on the study of Irish political discourse on Twitter, amongst which the 2015 Marriage Referendum was a major case study.

Interested in how identity and political discourse are mediated in the structured conversational spaces of social media, and how the emergent field of computational social science addresses and answers these issues with new methodologies. Especially relevant here are the application and development of ethics in digital research. Member of the RIA Irish Humanities Alliance board, and working group on Digital Humanities. Co-founder of DCU's Interdisciplinary Digital Research Group (IDRG), more details on which are available at: hybridresearch.org Website: <http://www.donalmulligan.com> Email: donal.mulligan@dcu.ie

Laëtitia Nebot-Deneuille - School of English, DCU, Ireland

I am a first year Phd student working at the School of English. I am working on gender and queer issues in four Anglo-American novels taking place in Venice at the beginning of the twentieth-century. laetitia.nebotdeneuille2@mail.dcu.ie

Aileen O'Driscoll Ph. D. - School of Communications, DCU, Ireland

Dr Aileen O'Driscoll is Assistant Professor in Media and Communications and is currently Chair of the BA in Communications Studies programme at the School of Communications, Dublin City University. Her interests are in the Cultural and Creative Industries, with her current research focused on gender, media and advertising. Aileen has contributed to research for the Global Media Monitoring Project, as well as looking at the representation of women's voices on Ireland's airwaves. With an interest in arts and culture, especially focusing on women's involvement in these fields, Aileen is on the organising committee of the annual Dublin Feminist Film Festival. aileen.odriscoll@dcu.ie

David O'Mullane - SALIS, DCU, Ireland

David O'Mullane is a doctoral scholar at SALIS, DCU. He is a graduate of the MA in Sexuality Studies from DCU where he developed an interest in visual culture and its entanglement with the sociopolitical aspects of queerness and sexuality. He is working on a PhD entitled The Art of Cruising: Public Sex Cultures, LGBT Politics and XXIst Century Art. His research on contemporary art draws on spatial theory and memory studies to parse the connection between public sex cultures and contemporary LGBT identity politics. david.omullane2@mail.dcu.ie

Ray O'Neill Ph. D. - DCU, Ireland

Dr. Ray O'Neill is Assistant Professor in Psychotherapy with DCU's School of Nursing, Psychotherapy and Community Health and a Psychoanalytic Psychotherapist in private practice working mainly, but not exclusively within the LGBTQ community, where he has acted as a director of the Gay Switchboard Dublin, an LGBTQ social advocate and featured writer with Gay Community News. He has worked as a Research Associate with the Centre for Gender and Women Studies at Trinity College Dublin. As a psychoanalyst, he writes extensively on the gay position for analysts and analysts within psychoanalytic discourse and practice with his DCU doctoral research exploring the subjectivities involved and imposed on men in being called 'homosexual'. As one of Ireland's few resident male Agony Aunts, a regular contributor to The Ray Darcy Show, and co-fronting RTE's Then Comes Marriage Ray works significantly (and sometimes with significance) with the media in discoursing love, relationships, and desire in the twenty-first century. Current research explores relationships between desire and contemporary modern technologies; and the individual and collective transmission of trauma across generations, with particular emphasis on the Irish Famine experiences. rayb.oneill@dcu.ie www.machna.ie

Hari Hara Sudhan Ramaswamy - Bharathidasan University, India

Hari Hara Sudhan Ramaswamy is a Rashtriya Uchchataar Shiksha Abhiyaan (RUSA) 2.0 Project Fellow pursuing research on Water, Sanitation and Hygiene (WASH) and its intersections with Gender and Environment. This is funded by the Ministry of Education, Government of India. They work at the Department of Womens' Studies at Bharathidasan University, India. They are a non-binary and gender non-conforming person. In their current role, besides research on various other projects on topics like entrepreneurship, gender and higher education, Hari has also sensitized academics across India on LGBTIQ+ people and their issues and has contributed towards framing syllabus for government schools in Tamil Nadu, India. In addition to these, they actively pursue research-related international collaborations. They hold a BSc (Psychology) & an MA (Development Policy and Practice). They were featured twice in The Times of India's Education Times supplement where they published on Climate Change in 2009. They were also the recipient of Monash University's Vice-Chancellor's Award in 2007. They are an emerging scholar-activist interested in various aspects of LGBTIQ+ people's lives.

harihs.research@gmail.com <https://www.linkedin.com/in/harihsramaswamy/>

Richard Rawlings - Northumbria University, England

Richard Rawlings is a PhD candidate researching rural sexualities in the UK. richard.rawlings@northumbria.ac.uk

Paola Rivetti Ph. D. - School of Law and Government, DCU, Ireland

I am an Associate Professor in Politics. I was awarded the 2018 Early-Career Researcher of the Year Prize by the IRC and the 2018 DCU President's Award for Early-Career Researcher. My research interests focus on the government of societies and polities in the Middle East and North Africa from a comparative perspective, and on social and political mobilisations. I am in the process of developing a new research project that examines the intersection between technology and sexuality in the region, looking at how the Internet and medical/reproductive technologies (from hymenoplasty to medicines such as Viagra) transform gender regimes. I authored numerous scientific as well as non-academic publications on these topics, published in several languages (Persian, English, French, Spanish, Italian). paola.rivetti@dcu.ie

Sarmistha Roy P.h.D. - Royal University of Bhutan, Bhutan

Sarmistha Roy was born and raised in Tripura, a small state in North-East India. She is an academic and holds a Doctoral degree in English. She is currently working in Bhutan. She enjoys singing, painting and writing and is mostly lost in her own world of vampires, witches, superheroes, and zombies. She is a pluviophile, a pogonophile, and a Swiftie. She enjoys works of Emily Dickinson and Charles Bukowski. She has published a few of her poems in reputed journals like Muse India. She tweets @CanvasnCrayons. sarmistharoyagartala@gmail.com

Annette Skade - School of English, DCU, Ireland

Annette Skade is from Manchester and has lived on Ireland's Beara peninsula for many years. She has a degree in Ancient Greek and Philosophy from Liverpool University, and an MA in Poetry Studies from DCU, where she has just completed her PhD on the Canadian poet, Anne Carson, at the School of English. Her paper on materiality in the work of Anne Carson, 'And how does it alter you to see it there floating?' Nox, Float and the Reader" was published in Ex-centric Narratives: Journal of Anglophone Literature, Culture and Media" in 2018 and she has given papers at various conferences and symposiums, including the Politics of Space and the Humanities conference in Thessaloniki in 2017, the Irish Association for American Studies Postgraduate Symposium in 2017, and the Law and Literature and In and Out of Silence Symposiums at DCU in 2019. She is also a poet and her collection Thimblebrig was published by Bradshaw Books, Cork in 2013. She is from a working class background and her poems appear in "The Children of the Nation: An Anthology of Working People's Poetry from Contemporary Ireland", published by Culture Matters and she has recently had a short article on Anne Carson "the poor core of the world wide open" published on their website: <http://www.culturematters.org.uk/index.php/arts/poetry/item/3519-the-poor-core-of-the-world-wide-open-the-poetry-of-anne-carson>

Her poems are published in Ireland, the U.K., Australia and the U.S. She has won several international poetry competitions. In 2017 she was Irish Writers' Centre/ Florence Writers 'Writer in Residence' at St Mark's Cultural Association in Florence. Much of her recent work is ecopoetry, and she gave a reading of ecopoetry at the ASLE "A Place On the Edge?" Conference in Orkney in 2019. <http://annetteskade.com>

Olga Springer Dr. Phil. - SALIS, DCU, Ireland

Dr Olga Springer is Assistant Professor in the School of Applied Language and Intercultural Studies at Dublin City University, Ireland. She completed her Magister Artium and doctoral studies in English Literature at the University of Tübingen, Germany. She is currently exploring avenues of research in gender and sexuality studies. Her other research interests include intertextuality, ambiguity in literary texts, and Victorian literature. She is the newsletter editor for the European Society of Comparative Literature (ESCL) and a member of its Executive Committee. Her book "Ambiguity in Charlotte Brontë's Vilette" was published in February 2020. olga.springer@dcu.ie

Abigail Susik P.h.D. - Willamette University, United States

Abigail Susik is Associate Professor of Art History at Willamette University and author of Surrealist Sabotage and the War on Work (2021). She has written numerous essays devoted to Surrealism and is co-editor of Absolutely Modern Mysteries: Surrealism and Film After 1945 (2021) and Radical Dreams: Surrealism, Counterculture, Resistance (2021). She is co-curator of the 2021–22 exhibition Alan Glass: Surrealism's Secret at Leeds Arts University and also curated a major survey of Imogen Cunningham's photographs at the Hallie Ford Museum of Art, Salem, OR, in 2016. Susik is a founding board member of the International Study for the Society of Surrealism and co-organised its 2018 and 2019 conferences.

asusik@willamette.edu <https://willamette.edu/arts-sciences/arth/faculty/susik/index.html>

Caroline West, Ph.D. - SALIS Alumni, Ireland

Dr. Caroline West completed her PhD in 2020 in the SALIS department at DCU. Her research explored the experiences of women working in the American mainstream pornography industry, situating these experiences in the context of international feminist debate on pornography. This research analysed nuances of stigma, violence, and interactions with fans. Previous to this Caroline had completed her MA in Sexuality Studies at DCU. Post PhD, Dr. West has gone on to become a frequent media commentator on sex related topics, and writes a weekly sex column for evoke.ie as well as being the sexpert for the Elaine show on Virgin Media One. She is also the sex & relationship expert at Bumble Ireland, and hosts a podcast about sex called Glow West which has been listened to in 160 countries. Currently she is working on a book about Monto and sex work. More information here. helloitscarolinewest@gmail.com

David Wilders - DCU, Ireland

David Wilders is a PhD student at DCU interested in Irish Literature and Literary and Cultural Disability Studies. His interests outside of academia include Liverpool F.C., reading, listening to music and musical theatre.

Updated: 16/3/22