RESEARCH EXPERIENCE

Self-designed and executed research projects:

- Ethiopia & Switzerland: Second Book Project.
This project is an intellectual history of Africa's regional refugee law. My goal is to trace the impact of ideas of pan-Africanism, and the effects of decolonization and the Cold War on the existence of the convention and the formulation of its various drafts. The African refugee convention not only determined the fate of African refugees until the present day, but it also inspired the South American Cartagena refuge declaration of 1984. Archival research will primarily be conducted in Addis Ababa at the African Union's (AU) archives and at the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) archives in Geneva during the spring of 2019.
- Kenya & Switzerland: Skilled Return Migration. In the summer of 2016 I engaged in preliminary research in the archives of the International Organization for Migration (IOM), the International Labor Organization (ILO), the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) in Geneva, Switzerland, as well as the IOM's regional and field offices in Nairobi, Kenya, to assess their material regarding programs that targeted return migration of skilled Africans to develop their home countries post-decolonization. I plan to develop this into an article.
- Angola, Germany, Mozambique, Portugal, South Africa: Dissertation Research. Between 2014 and 2015 I conducted 268 life history interviews with former workers, students, and government personal in Angola, Mozambique and Germany. These included individual and group interviews, semi-structured, structured and unstructured conversations, and the application of a survey to 251 people. In addition, I consulted the national archives and various ministerial archives across the five countries. As a spin off I produced a short film about the Mozambican workers together with filmmaker Jack Davis: "A Democratic Republic of the Mind." In addition, I published in relevant non-academic journals and gave interviews to Zimbabwean, Dutch and German press.
- Indonesia: GIZ consultancy: In 2012 I spent three months researching and assessing one of the central program components of the Center for International Migration at the German Development Cooperation Agency, GIZ, designed to facilitate the return and reintegration of Germany-trained experts into their home communities. To that end, I visited returned experts in their work environments across Indonesia and conducted in depth interviews about their experience. The strategic report was published in the CIM Paper Series (6) of the Center for International Development of the GIZ, May 2014.
- Namibia & South Africa. Masters thesis research. In April 2010 I expanded my Bachelor research on the nexus between land rights, identity and development by including a comparative case of the Hai||om San in Outjo and Outjiwarongo in Namibia. I conducted interviews with community leaders and members, NGO workers, journalists and legal consultants in Windhoek and beyond. Further, I consulted documents at the Namibian national archives.

- South Africa: Bachelor thesis research. The thesis historically situates the ǀKhomani San land claims and traces the development, application, and appropriation of the Bushman myth and its power to define traditions. Over a period of three months in 2008 I conducted individual and group oral history interviews with the ǀKhomani community in Afrikaans and engaged in participant observation on their lands in the Green Kalahari. I interviewed their lawyer, government personal, NGO workers and lodge owners from the Northern Cape. I consulted documents in the National Archives and the University of the Witwatersrand Archives in Johannesburg, and the Cape Town Archives. In 2009 I also worked with community members to put on an exhibition at Mount Holyoke College “Under the Shadow of the Camera: Reflections of the ǀKhomani San,” focusing on San photographic depictions of their own realities and historical San – Western interactions. I went back to the community to discuss the research results in 2010.
- International Labor Organization: From June until December 2007 I researched global production and migration chains, focusing on migration in the health and IT sectors in South Africa, resulting in an internal report: “Dynamics and determinants of South African intellectual/scientific diaspora communities and their possible contributions to the socio-economic and political advancement of South African development.”

Collaborative Research Projects:

- Global History Collaborative: After attending the Global History Collaborative Summer School in Japan in September 2015, interested early career global historians from Tokyo University, Humboldt University and Freie University in Berlin, the L’École des Hautes Etudes en Science Sociales (EHESS) in Paris, and Princeton University split into teams spanning nationalities and research traditions to co-publish articles for a special journal issue of Atelier entitled “Experiments in Global History—a collaborative approach.” The production of the journal is collaborative and democratic and includes the use of digital media as well as in person workshops.
- Argentina: In 2013 I spent five months in Buenos Aires at the regional office of the International Organization for Migration researching labor migration in South America for an internal report entitled “Putting Migrant Integration in South America On the Map,” co-written with Elizabeth Warn, IOM.
- Angola with Professor Mariana Candido: In July 2011 we travelled around Angola to research local memories of the history of slavery, resulting in a book chapter. We consulted church archives in Luanda and various smaller locations in the provinces of Benguela, Huambo, Huila, and Namibe and examined museum’s holdings in Luanda and Benguela. In addition we conducted oral history interviews with village chiefs, villagers and museum personnel.

TEACHING EXPERIENCE

Lecturer. History Dialogue, online course, Princeton University, Jan. 2019-Dez.2019.

I am conceptualizing and conducting a blended learning course that connects online components on research methods and ethics with presence components supporting refugee learner and host country student teams in Rwanda, Kenya, and the MENA region to formulate their own history research projects. Coordinating and mentoring the execution of the research, the write up, and presentation and discussion of the results.

Guest lecture and seminar. Afrikanische Migration in Globaler Perspektive [African Migration in Global Perspective], Historisches Seminar, MAS Applied History, University Zürich, Switzerland, February 2nd, 2019.

Lecturer. Theorie, Methode und Geschichte der Geschichtswissenschaft [Theory, method and history of the academic discipline of history], Freie University, Berlin, (Oct. 2018- Feb.19). BA Seminar.

Lecturer. Processes of Refuge Seeking in 20th-century Africa and beyond, Freie University, Berlin, (Oct. 2018-Feb.19). Master level seminar.

Lecturer. African Migrations in Global Perspective, Humboldt University and Freie University, Berlin (April-July 2018). Seminar open for masters students in African Studies and Global History from both universities.

Assistant Instructor. The Global History Lab, MOOC Princeton University, NJ, Prof. Jeremy Adelman (June 2016 – May 2017).

I co-taught Global History 1300 - presented via edX. This massive open online course brought together students from Princeton, around the world, and select refugee camps in Kenya and Jordan to learn global history collaboratively through blended-learning in a global setting. As Super-Tutor for Kakuma Refugee Camp in Kenya, I taught local tutors (2) and students (19) in the camp as well as online from Princeton and designed the appropriate material for the local tutors.

Lecture. Migration and Integration in South America: How to Understand and Measure Migrant Integration, lecture given during the Summer School on Migration and Integration, International Organization for Migration (IOM), Prague Office, University of South Bohemia, Ceske Budejovice, Czech Republic, Sept. 5, 2013.

Instructor. English 101, Princeton Prison Teaching Initiative, Garden State Youth Correctional Facility, N.J., (Feb. - May 2012).

Co-taught 26 inmates college level English composition class. Responsibilities included teaching and grading.

Lead Instructor. Activism on Paper: Writing and Social Responsibility in the 21st Century, January Term class, Mount Holyoke College, (Jan. 2009).

Developed guiding set of course goals and syllabus, reading list, writing assignments, discussion activities, lectures, co-taught with Assistant Writing Center Coordinator. Two-credits; seminar-style, included discussion sections and writing lab. Graded, held office-hours.

Speaking, Arguing, Writing Mentor. Mount Holyoke College Weissman Center for Leadership and the Liberal Arts (Feb. 2006 - Jan. 2009).

Mentored 120 students in English, German, History, Russian and Eurasian Studies classes. Gave public speaking workshops, held weekly individual sessions focusing on presentation skills and essay writing. Received semester long training in peer mentoring theory and practice.
